Our dreams do not come from “another world”, and they are not a look into the future.

All our dreams have something to do with our fears, longings, wishes, needs, ... 51 .... . But something on the “outside” may ... 52 ... what we dream. If a person is hungry, or ... 53 ..., or cold, he may have these feelings in his dreams. If the covers have slipped ... 54 ... your bed, you may dream you are ... 55 ... undressed in a cold, icy wind. The dream you have tonight is likely to come ... 56 ... the experiences you will have today.

So your dream comes from something that affects you ... 57 ... you are asleep (you are cold, a noise) and it may also ... 58 ... your past experiences and the interests you have now. This ... 59 ... why children are likely to dream of a school ... 60 ..., hungry people of food, homesick soldiers of their families, prisoners of freedom.

On a Thursday evening in October, 1931, the ship 'Voyager' sank. The ship had been sailing since the end of September, when she left London, and was on her way from England to Australia. The only survivor was an Englishman called Wilfred Batty, who saved himself by swimming two miles. He spent three years on an island in the middle of the Indian Ocean.

The island was quite small, and he could walk round the whole of it in an hour. He climbed up the one hill and put a flag on it, as a signal. At night Batty slept in a cave, where he felt quite at home. During the day, he often fished with a home-made net. He cooked the fish on a wood fire.

Batty stayed on the island for almost three years, until August 1934. A ship was sailing near the island, and the captain saw Batty's signal. The sailors found a man in a long blue coat with dark hair and a beard, looking rather like a gorilla. Batty was soon home, and a few years later he finally arrived in Australia by air.

People often claim that humans and animals are not as different as they appear. For example, dolphins are often credited with human – or even superhuman – intelligence and also a sort of sympathy with human beings. This attitude to dolphins is not (81: surprise) in a view of incidents like the following one, which (82: happen) the other day.

A lawyer's wife was (83: bath) alone on a private beach in Florida. She had only just (84: go) into the water when she was (85: carry) off by a strong current. She swallowed water and was beginning to lose consciousness, wishing that someone would come and rescue her. And she remembers how at this moment she was given a push and (86: find) herself walking heavily out of the water.

She (87: slow) recovered and turned to thank her rescuer. But there was no one about, only a pair of dolphins (88: play) a few metres offshore.

At this point a man (89: come) running up to say that he had seen what he had taken for a (90: die) body being pushed ashore by one of the dolphins.

It happened in our own times and was witnessed by a number of people.

Boxing matches were very popular in England two hundred and fifty years ago. In those days boxers fought with bare fists for prize money. Because of this they were called "prize-fighters". However, boxing was very cruel as there were no rules and fighters could be seriously injured or even killed during a match.

One of the most colourful figures in boxing history was Daniel Mendoza, born in 1764. Though he was technically a prize fighter, Mendoza did much to change crude prize-fighting into sport, for he brought science to the game. In his day, Mendoza enjoyed tremendous popularity. He was adored by rich and poor alike.

Mendoza rose to fame swiftly after a boxing match when he was only 14 years old. This attracted the attention of Richard Humphries who was the most eminent boxer in England. He offered to train Mendoza and his young pupil was quick to learn. In fact, Mendoza became so successful that Humphries turned against him. The two men quarrelled bitterly and it was clear that the argument could only be settled by a fight. A match was held at Stilton where both men fought for an hour. The public bet a great deal of money on Mendoza, but he was defeated. Mendoza met Humphries in the ring on a later occasion and he lost for a second time. It was not until his third match in 1790 that he finally beat Humphries and became Champion of England. Meanwhile, he founded a highly successful Academy and even Lord Byron became one of his pupils. He earned enormous sums of money and was paid as much as £100 for a single appearance. Despite this, he was so extravagant that he was always in debt. After he was defeated by a boxer Gentleman Jackson, he was quickly forgotten. He was sent to prison for failing to pay his debts and died in poverty in 1836.
